Title :	The Book of What? The Book of Who? The Book of Why?
Author or Publisher :	Kingfisher
Content & Comment :	What kinds of questions do you usually ask? What is your name? Or when can I go out to play? To become a good reader, it is not enough to just ask some simple questions. We need to ask some questions that can inspire us. It means we need to ask some questions that lead us to think deeply. In each of these books, there are 50 questions that may be you have not thought about before. Here are some examples: What is air made of ? Who first flushed the toilet? Why do giraffes have long necks? I recommend you to read these books not just because I want you to know the answers of the questions but also I want you to learn how to ask questions. Remember: Asking questions makes us smarter.

Source of the Book :	You can borrow these books on the bookshelf of Generalities in our school library.
